For the first time ever, a Swedish contingent of eight Gripen fighters is in Estonia for an annual Swedish air exercise called AFX18.

These Gripen fighters are currently based at the Ämari Air Base. Flights have been scheduled through the day with aerial exercises mostly happening in the Swedish airspace.

The Estonian Air Force is also participating in the exercise. Commander of the Estonian Air Force, Colonel Riivo Valge said, "This is the first joint exercise between the air forces of Estonia and Sweden after the restoration of independence. It is definitely an interesting challenge for both parties and it provides an excellent opportunity to practice cooperation with different countries."

Besides Gripen fighters, more than 90 personnel from the Swedish Air wing F 7 Sotenas are also in Estonia. In addition to Sweden and Estonia, Finland, France and Spain are also taking part in the exercise.

AFX18 was first held in 2010. The exercise aims to develop high availability of the Swedish fighters and hone the participating pilots' skills to perform in a high conflict scenario for long durations.

AFX18 will end on 31st May.

Smoke In The Kitchen

Globally, Indoor Air Pollution (IAP) causes premature deaths of 1.5 million people a year. As Shell Foundation campaigned to change the way rural households cooked, it became important to share the story with the world. To drive communication on the ground, Smoke In The Kitchen, a news platform was launched.

Over a period of three years, the platform became the repository of global learning and understanding of indoor air pollution.

The platform helps global audience connect with the cause and take up on the initiative in their respective regions.
